Christine Clarke M.Ed, BSN, RN

Christine Clarke is a native New Yorker who came to New England to attend Stonehill College in Easton, MA where she earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Elementary education. While at Stonehill, she was involved in many campus activities which lead her to working at Bentley University where she was a Residence Director for three years while working on her Master's degree. Christine received her Master's of Education in Moderate Special Needs from Boston College in 2003. Christine taught grades 1-8 in Boston and Westwood after receiving her Master's. From there she spent the majority of her teaching career teaching grades pre-K through 3rd Special Education in the Waltham Public School system. While teaching Christine began thinking about going back to school to become a nurse and she began three years of taking pre-requisite classes in preparation to begin attending a nursing program. In 2009, Christine was accepted into the Accelerated Bachelor of Science in Nursing Program (ABSN) at the MGH Institute of Health Professions. Christine graduated in May 2010 with her Bachelor of Science in Nursing degree and earned her RN in August 2010. While searching for a nursing position, returned to teaching in Waltham in an eighth grade Learning Center for special education students and also was a private duty nurse. In 2011, Christine was hired to work as a Registered Nurse on Bigelow 11, an adult acute inpatient medical unit at Massachusetts General Hospital. In the fall of 2012, Christine began as a Lab Assistant in the Practical Nursing Program at Roxbury Community College. She is also a clinical instructor for the MGH Institute of Health Professions at MGH this summer.
